PROFESSOR SEELY DIES AT 89 YEARS

Was in Active Service on Middlebury College Faculty From 1861 to 1905.

Henry Martyn Seely, Professor-emeritus of Natural History, died at his home, 3 South St., Friday evening, May 4. He had been connected with Middlebury College longer than any one else on the roll of the faculty, and a large number of our alumni will mourn his loss as that of a devoted teacher. a true friend, and a man of unusually sweet and gracious disposition and pure and noble character.

Professor Seely was born October 2, 1828 at South Onondaga, N. Y. He was the son of Joseph Owen and Susanna (Stearns) Seely. After a course of study in Cazenovia Seminary he entered the scientific department of Yale University and received the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy in 1856. Yale also gave him the degree of Master of Arts in 1860. He also received the degree M. D. from the Berkshire Medical Institution in 1857, and for a number of years was professor of Chemistry in that institution, specializing in poisons. In 1867 he went to Germany for graduate study devoting his time between the universities of Freiburg and Heidelberg. He was two years in Germany and among his instructors was the celebrated Baron Bunsen. On his return to America he became professor of Chemistry in the medical department of the University of Vermont. In 1861 he was called to Middlebury as professor of Chemistry and Natural History, and occupied this chair for 31 years. From 1892 to 1895 he was professor of Natural History and since 1895 has been Professor-emeritus.

For three years, 1875–78, he was secretary of the Vermont Board of Agriculture and edited the state agricultural reports, preparing also much of the material. Professor Seely held strong views on the temperance question and was twice candidate of the Prohibition party for Governor of Vermont. During the later years of his active life he gave special attention to Geology and in co-operation with ex-President Brainerd made valuable contributions to the geology of the Champlain valley, He was a member of the American Chemical Society, the Geological Society of America, the Vermont Botanical Club, and other scientific organizations.

Professor Seely had been in failing

Midd. Shut Out 2-0 on Thursday Home Team Downs M. A. C. 4-2 on Friday.

Thursday afternoon in a game conspicuous for its many errors the Massachusetts Agricultural College defeated Middlebury by a 2 to 0 score. With determination in their minds, our boys went into Friday's game and defeated the M. A. C, team 4 to 2.

The game of Thursday was played in such cold weather that neither team could do justice to itself. The Middlebury men made ten errors while the visitors made three. Crippen pitched a good game for the losers, but had poor support by his team mates. He struck out nine men, passed two, and allowed five hits for the winners. Westman struck out five men, and allowed five hits.

Friday's game was a thriller from start to finish. For the home team, Satterlee made an exceptionally fine beginning but was found for six hits later in the game. Of the first eight men who faced him, he struck out six and secured the assists on the other two put-outs. Quimby, the Aggies' best pitcher, was forced to withdraw from the box in the second inning because of Middlebury's heavy hitting. Peterson replaced him and did the best that was possible for the losing team, considering the way our fellows felt after Thursday's game. The game was noticeable for the large number of long hits.

JUNIOR WEEK OPENS WITH PRIZE SPEAKING

Parker and Merrill Contests Attract Unusual Interest—Speaking in Gymnasium.

Junior Week festivities were opened Wednesday evening with the Parker and Merrill prize-speaking contests. It is generally conceded that the contests this year were unusually successful both in point of the orations selected for competition and in the quality of the delivery. The three freshmen contestants were the most uniformly superior in their delivery, and it was an exceedingly close choice between the three. Among the sophomores there was far greater divergence, their work not being nearly so uniformly good. The freshmen, it is believed, averaged considerably higher than the sophomores. Pitkin, for the sophomores, easily secured first place, showing good form and superior interpretation. The coaching was done by Professors Harrington and Davison. The work of all the candidates was commendable. Following is the program:

Parker Contest:

Music

1. The Lance of Kanana, French
   Philip D. Aines
2. The Necessity of Force, Thurston
   Elbert T. Gallagher
3. The Unknown Speaker, Lippard
   William A. Huggard
4. The Raven, Poe
   Henry S. Thomas

Music.

The first contestant, Philip D. Aines, was unable to speak on account of illness. The program for the Merrill Contest was:

1. The Union Soldier, Thurston
   Leon M. Adkins
2. Tribute to General Grant, Porter
   Ronald J. Darby
3. America's Mission, Bryan
   Seymour L. Hammond
4. The Effect of the Death of Lincoln, Beecher
   Frederick L. Jones

Music

5. The Assault on Charles Sumner, Burlingame
   Paul E. Pitkin
6. The New South,
   Cecil Plumb
7. The Battle of Waterloo, Fowler
   James D. Searles
8. The Evil of War, Channing
   Harrie L. Smith

Music.

The judges, Rev. Henry C. Newell, Judge Charles I. Button, and Mr. Charles E. Crane, awarded the following prizes in the Parker contest:

First, Henry S. Thomas.
Second, William A. Huggard.

Prizes in the Merrill contest:

First, Paul E. Pitkin.
Second, James D. Searles.
Third, Cecil Plumb.
Fourth, Harrie L. Smith.

Dr. Pedley Speaks at Vespers.

The vespers address on april 29 was delivered by Dr. Pedley who spoke on "America's Service to Japan." Dr. Pedley has been working in Japan for more than 20 years under the American Board of Commisioners for Foreign Missions and his talk was most interesting and instructive.

JUNIOR PLAY GIVEN IN GYMNASIUM MAY 5

"The Lady of Lyons" Presented to Packed Audience—A Difficult Drama Skillfully Rendered.

The class of 1918 closed a most successful Junior Week with the presentation of "The Lady of Lyons" by the well known playwright, Sir Charles Bulwer-Lytton. The plot of the drama which is staged in 5 acts, was suggested by a very pretty little tale called "The Bellows Mender". The incidents are, however, greatly altered from those in the tale and the characters entirely recast.

Under the excellent supervision of Professor Burrage the play, which is perhaps one of the most difficult ever presented in Middlebury, was an entire success.

Claude Melnotte, the central figure of the drama, typifies the "perfect lover", whose one aim is to make himself worthy of the woman he loves. Of peasant origin, he educates himself, step by step, to be a fitting mate for Pauline Deschapples, the proud and wealthy beauty of Lyons. At last he ventures to send her some verses, which she rejects with disdain. Stung by this treatment, he becomes a party to a scheme concocted by Beauseant,—a disappointed lover of Pauline's—whereby Claude passes himself off as a prince and wins Pauline. He marries her, takes her to his humble home, and there avows his guilt and offers her such reparation as lies in his power—a speedy divorce. The girl, at first indignant, is won to love by his magnanimity. She now in turn becomes the suitor, but Claude declares himself to be quite unworthy of her love and persists in his renunciation. He leaves his heart-broken bride in her father's care and disappears.

Two years pass, spent by Claude in fighting under an assumed name in his country's cause, and by Pauline in sorrowing for her lost lover—Her father is threatened with bankruptcy. Beauseant, seeing his opportunity, offers to save the father at the price of the girl's hand. The bill of divorce and the marriage contract are about to be signed, when Claude, who has now redeemed his honor by his bravery in war, suddenly reappears and claims and recovers his wife.

Particular mention should be made of the masterly handling of the two leading roles taken by Miss Elsie Monteith and Mr. Walter E. Anderson. The impersonations of Pauline Deschappelle and Claude Melnotte were exceedingly difficult for amateur acting, requiring an exhibition of prolonged emotional interpretation very difficult to sustain. Yet both of the parts were done exquisitely and gave evidence of most careful coaching on the part of the director and a keen and painstaking appreciation of the spirit of the drama by the actors. The entire cast worked together harmoniously and each performed his part without a slip. Kenneth Gorham as Colonel Damas served as a comic foil and interpreter of the play, performing much the same function as the old Greek chorus. The successful acting of his part greatly assisted the EDITORIAL.

The Junior Week program was carried out under difficulties. The unrest caused by the war and the continued cloudy and raw weather combined to work against the pre-arranged schedule. In spite of these obstacles the whole affair was a success. The spirit which prevailed throughout the week was excellent. A large number of visitors had the opportunity to observe us under unfavorable circumstances which would give them a more correct basis for estimating what Middlebury stands for and actually accomplishes.

A few of the events had to be arranged for hastily owing to cancellations of previous engagements due to war conditions, yet the versatility of the managers is indicated by the evident success of the hurried re-adjustments. The regular events were the result of a great deal of painstaking effort and careful planning. Junior Week has proved a decided success. It is for us now to turn to the more serious duties of college work or to the service of our country wherever we may feel the greatest call. These are times when every man must prove his metal.

The College Annual.

On April 28 the 1918 Kaleidoscopes were distributed. It is only just to give the credit which is due those who have published the book full recognition in these columns. There is no magic in editing a successful college annual or indeed any other publication. Granted a reasonable amount of talent, the two essentials are enthusiasm and a great deal of hard work. The 1918 Kaleidoscope gives evidence of both.

In The Campus of June 7, 1916, the new board announced its intention of having the book ready for distribution before Junior week. It seemed at that time like an idle and vain boast which would better have remained unspoken. The facts now justify the announcement, but unforeseen difficulties made the carrying out of the program very difficult. The increasingly high cost of material in all branches of work as well as the attendant delay in the filling of contracts presented obstacles with which no other board has had to deal. In spite of all this, the quality of the book is, we believe, well above the average, and it embodies two or three new features so evidently apt that they will in all probability remain a permanant feature in the future issues of our year book. We wish to express in behalf of the undergraduate body our appreciation of the faithful service of the retiring board and the excellent success of its production.

COMMUNICATIONS

Rhodes Scholar Writes of English Sentiment Toward America.

The following communication was received recently from Wayne C. Bosworth, our Rhodes scholar at Oxford, England. Coming as it does from an American who witnessed the first change of heart among the English people toward the American policy resulting from President Wilson's message before Congress on April 2, it should and will be of peculiar interest to Middlebury College and her alumni. It would seem that the true feeling of the English people is clearly set forth in this communication. We earnestly desire Mr. Bosworth to send notes to us from time to time on the situation in England which will be greatly appreciated by all who take a vital interest in the great world struggle.

Torquay, England,
April 5, 1917.

To the Editor of the Campus.

President Wilson's message, delivered in Congress on April 2nd, advising Congress to declare war upon Germany, was read by comparatively few Americans in England. Yet to those of us who are over here the news has come as a great relief. During the past year, especially up to the moment of our breaking off diplomatic relations with Germany, the great majority of English people were quite unable to understand the policy of our government. They could not understand but that we had repeatedly refused to do that which honor and principle and right demanded we should do. Perhaps they were right; I, myself, must think that they were wrong. But, right or wrong, that is what was generally thought. And it was small consolation to realize that both people and papers were courteous enough and discreet enough not to give vent to their feelings in the matter. For over and over again little facts were occurring which revealed the truth of the situation. I remember, for instance, an incident connected with a meeting of the American Club at Oxford which is quite relevant. The head of a certain college was scheduled to address us one evening; he is a man who had always shown the greatest interest in and sympathy for Americans at Oxford, and we were looking forward to the occasion. About a week before the meeting, the secretary of the club received a message from him asking that other arrangements be made, as he was suffering from influenza, ana besides he thought it best to wait until President Wilson decided what an overt act is.

Now, in one day, all that has changed. The London papers yesterday devoted long columns to a discussion of the message. All past resentment and distrust were forgotten, and a whole-hearted welcome was extended to another ally to the cause of justice. I hope those leaders have been extensively quoted in American papers. For it may be thought that the enthusiasm in England over the event was due simply to the acquisition of another ally, to the added strength which would come from our navy and army and dollars. Let me quote from just one paper, the Daily News, a few lines which are typical of all that was said.

"But we should convey a wholly false impression if we suggested that the emotion created in this country by the President's speech was due to its bearing on the war. It was due to something deeper even than this. It was the response to an appeal as noble and moving as any ever addressed to the sons of men. In this great utterance we seem to hear at last the authentic voice of humanity stating the issue, pronouncing the judgment, awakening the conscience of the world to the mighty things at stake. Never in history have there been two such declarations as those made in the past few days in Russia and Washington. Deep has answered to deep, and across the sundering ocean the democracy of America clasps the hand of the democracy of Russia, freed at last from the gyves of the centuries. By the light of this prodigious union we see the issue of the war emerge with a grand simplicity of outline. President Wilson states that issue as only a great liberal, trained in the speech of Burke, and fired with the humanism of Lincoln, could state it."

I cannot but think that the drilling at Middlebury has gone on with redoubled energy since war has come. And, although we Americans at Oxford are scattered now for the spring vacation, the same enthusiasm has, I am sure, come to all of us. I expect that we will all be gathered at Oxford within a few days ready to prepare ourselves for whatever may be needed of us. Most of us will have to remain in England until June, but I hope that steps may be taken so that the weeks spent here may not be lost time.

Yours,
W. C. BOSWORTH '11.

The "reverend Seniors" appeared with caps and gowns for the first time in chapel on Thursday, May 3.

MIDDLEBURY WINS IN DUAL MEET

Middlebury and Trinity Tie in Twelfth Event with Score of 54.

In the first dual meet of the season, Middlebury defeated the Trinity College track team by the narrow margin of 64 to 62 last Saturday at Porter Field. Manager Mason had a meet scheduled with Massachusetts Agricultural College for that afternoon, but it was cancelled.

All of the events of the meet were closely contested, Middlebury getting away strong in the track events but somewhat weakening in the field sports. After twelve events had been run off the score was 54 to 54. The thirteenth event was the two mile run in which four men kept together, each taking turns leading for seven laps. In the last lap, Davis with a burst of speed finished an easy first with Jones in second place. In the last event, the high jump, Nelson of Trinity secured first with five feet six inches. Bjorn and Tatro were tied for second place, but the Trinity delegation protested and each were given three more attemps at the winner's height but each failed to clear the bar. Finally it was decided, after the spectators had left the field, to divide the last points evenly between Bjorn and Tatro.

For Trinity, Captain Bjorn led with twelve points. For Middlebury, Captain Lee had fourteen points, Jones thirteen, and Darby eleven.

health for a number of years and for severals months had not left his room. His mind continued active and until within a few weeks he followed the scientific papers with interest.

During his teaching years Professor Seely occupied a unique place among the instructors of Middlebury College. He was a man of the highest character and also of gentle and gracious ways. A generous kindness characterized all his relations with his students and he unfailingly won their highest respect for his sincere devotion to the best things in life. No one could ever doubt that Professor Seely was actuated by Christian motives and that he sought in all his conduct to carry out the spirit of the Christian faith. There was an indefineable gentleness and kindliness in his manner which made his students remember him for many years with constantly increasing affection and loyalty.

For many years he taught not only Chemistry but also Botany, Zoology and Geology. Despite the limited laboratory facilities and scarcity of equipment, he initiated all his students into laboratory processes and gave them an insight into scientific method. For over twenty years every student in the college had at least one appointment with Professor Seely every day during his junior and senior years. It fell to his lot to serve the college in trying days, but he never lost his hope or his confidence. The memory of his pure and gracious spirit will abide as one of the fairest chapters in the history of our institution.

At the Sunday chapel on May 6 President Thomas referred briefly to the character of Professor Seely in a sermon from the text "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." The funeral services were held Monday afternoon in the Methodist church, conducted by Rev. Dr. D. H. Corkran, assisted by Rev. George M. Moody. Interment was at Oakwood Cemetery, Syracuse, N. Y., on Wednesday.

Besides Mrs. Seely, Professor Seely is survived by four children, Mrs. John W. Chapman, Mrs. John M. Thomas '91, Dr. Henry H. Seely '94, Lockwood M. Seely '95. There are nine living grandchildren, of whom four have been or are now Middlebury students.

ANNUAL JUNIOR PROM

The annual Junior Prom was held in McCullough Gymnasium on Friday evening, May 4. The patrons and patronesses were President and Mrs. John M. Thomas, Professor and Mrs. E. C. Bryant, Professor and Mrs. G. W. Cunningham, Professor and Mrs. William S. Burrage, and Miss Eleanor S. Ross. President and Mrs. Thomas and Miss Ross were unable to attend. A large number of guests were present including relatives of many of the students, alumni, and sub-freshmen. The attendance at the Prom was large considering the unsettled state of affairs.

The decorations of the hall were simple and in accord with the prevalent patriotic spirit. American flags and bunting were used liberally, reminding one more of a 4th of July celebration than of an ordinary college function. The music was furnished by McEnelly's Singing Orchestra of Orange, Mass., which won such universal approval at the similar function last year. The music proved to be the chief attraction of the evening, tho it is reported that the punch, which was strictly in accord with well established principles of hygiene, was recieved with general good will.

The committee in charge was as follows: W. E. Anderson, chairman; L. N. Allyn, H. H. Chapman, H. B. Harris, W. B. Fullington, Miss Champagne, Miss Dean, Miss Norris, Miss Harris, and K. M. Gorham, Ex-officio.

Miss Ross Addresses Y. W. C. A.

Miss Ross spoke before the Y. W. C. A. on April 29 concerning her impressions of western religion. The girls were very enthusiastic and are anxious to have her speak to them again. Helen Clift acted as leader of the meeting, and Janet Johnson sang.

The distinctive feature of the whole play was the unusual freedom from amateur awkwardness which ordinarily accompanies a production of this sort.

The following characters completed the cast: Reid, Lynch, Lyon, Everett, Eastman, Whitney Fullington, Harris, Miss Foote and Miss Elmer.

The production, which was played to a full house and was a decided financial success, was in the hands of the following committee:

Mr. G. E. Wheelock, chairman; H. S. Drew, R. E. Mudge, C. F. Whitney, Miss H. S. Clift, Miss. H. B. Newton, and Miss C. J. Webster.

Agricultural Rally.

Thursday evening, April 26, at a meeting in Hepburn Hall, Professor Bonney, chairman of a committee on farm co-operation, announced that the college would grant releases to men desiring to work on farms. Full credit for the semester's work will be allowed for those whose work is satisfactory to the Administration Board.

Dean Hills of the University of Vermont addressed the meeting and urged the men to consider thoughtfully the shortage of food. He said that the world faced starvation unless a supreme effort was put forth now. County agent Carrigan also advised the men to consider seriously this work.

Special Meeting of the Women of the College.

A meeting of all the women in college was called at Pearsons Social Hall on Tuesday evening, May 1, when Professor Bonney and Miss Ross discussed ways in which the women could help meet demands made by the conditions of war. Professor Bonney, representing a recently chosen committee of the faculty, explained conditions under which women might leave college to work at home on the farm and still receive college credits for this semester's studies. He considered such work an especial opportunity, but at the same time urged the importance of keeping on with college work. Miss Ross emphasized the points made by Professor Bonney and in addition explained the Red Cross work, the details of the system, and the qualifications for membership. She suggested membership in the Red Cross branch, already organized among the women of the town, as an immediate step toward help along that line.

Silver Bay.

The Y. W. C. A. meeting will be in charge of the Silver Bay Club next Thursday, May 10. Every girl should make a special effort to come whether she intends to go to Silver Bay or not. Only those who have been there can fully appreciate what the Silver Bay spirit means, but if you have once experienced it, you will never forget it. Silver Bay is beautifully situated among the mountains on Lake George. Come and hear about Silver Bay friendships, classes, excursions, sports, and above all Silver Bay spirit.

An interesting bulletin has appeared in Battell Cottage showing pictures of the conference buildings at Silver Bay. A fine picture of The Lodge with Sunrise Mountain in the background occupies the main position. Sunrise Mountain is of peculiar interest to Silver Bay girls. Why not go and discover its charm?

The class-room shown does not exaggerate in the least the attractive rusticity of the buildings with their fire-places.

The view of Overlook Cottage is an excellent example of the architecture of all Silver Bay buildings. They blend well with the landscape for all are of rough bark and unhewn logs.

The entire scene with its tiny cottages nestled in the trees and reflected by the lake is one of unusual beauty.

Band Dance.

Saturday evening the college band gave a dance in the McCullough gymnasium. About fifty couples were in attendance.
